

Celebrating the Life of a Great American Actor

In recognition of a Great American Holiday (Labor Day, 2026). Blood Moon Productions proudly announces the release, on August 15, 2026, of the third and final volume of history's most comprehensive overview of the once most famous actor in the world, Clark Gable.

According to its publisher, Danforth Prince, "We've succeeded where others have failed. As it relates to Clark Gable, no one has ever attempted this before. Now, because virtually all of the first and second-hand witnesses to his life are Gone With the Wind, no one will ever attempt it again. Gable, an unlikely roughneck from the oil fields of Pennsylvania, thanks to an obscenely long-lived career spanning many eras of movie-going values, has morphed into "The Icon Who Endured." Blood Moon's newest production describes how and why."

"Here's how we've described it in booksellers' catalogues: After World War II, as other actors from the Golden Age faced oblivion, Clark Gable successfully adapted to the changing values of the New Hollywood and the New America. This is the third and final volume of Blood Moon's three-part overview of The King of Hollywood. It's about the final years (1939-1961) of Clark Gable, exposed full-frontal as a symbol of The Way We Were and a way of life that will never come back. He was more than just Rhett Butler emoting fitfully with Scarlett O'Hara during the Civil War. He's GABLE, still a potent icon and emissary of the 20th Century, cast into context with every film he ever made and every historic event he ever witnessed."

Clark Gable: Where Love Has Gone
Volume Three (1940-1961) of a Three-Part
Biography of the King of Hollywood.
Darwin Porter and Danforth Prince
ISBN 978-1-936003-91-4.

A postmodern overview with a BIG footprint (8 1/2 x 11"), hundreds of photos, "stories behind the story," and a BIG cast of characters. Available everywhere on August 15 through Ingram, Amazon.com, Barnes & Noble.com, and internet vendors everywhere

This, Volume Three, is the final installment of a trilogy whose first volume won awards from book festivals in New England, New York, and Los Angeles and whose second volume (focussing on Gable's 1939 hit, Gone With the Wind) won a "BEST BIOGRAPHY" award from the Great Southeast book festival in Atlanta. For more information, click on www.BloodMoonProductions.com

Clark Gable Where Love Has Gone

Volume Three (1940-1961) of a Three-Part
Biography of The King of Hollywood
Darwin Porter & Danforth Prince

After World War II, as other actors from the Golden Age faced oblivion, Clark Gable successfully adapted to the changing values of the New Hollywood and the New America.

This, the third in Blood Moon's three-part overview of "The Icon Who Endured," tells how he did it.

Here it is, the inside scoop on America's postwar reverence for everything to do with The King of Hollywood. It's about the final years of Clark Gable, exposed full-frontal as a symbol of The Way We Were and a way of life that will never come back.

BLOOD MOON PRODUCTIONS
Entertainment About "The American Century" and the Icons Who Entertained Us.

BloodMoonProductions.com